

MAKES CONFESSION OF INCENDIARISM

PROMINENT SUFFRAGETTE TELLS OF SETTING FIRE TO LEVER RESIDENCE.

A DRAMATIC INCIDENT

Sits in Court in Liverpool and Cools Recites Various Acts She Has Committed in Suffrage Cause.

Liverpool, Eng., July 10.—A dramatic confession of incendiarism was made by Mrs. Edith Rigby, well known militant suffragette and wife of a physician at Preston, sitting in the police court here today. Mrs. Rigby declared it was she who last Tuesday burned down the country residence at Rivington near Horwich, Lancashire, of Sir William L. Lever, causing damage estimated at $100,000. She further confessed to being the perpetrator of the outrage at the Liverpool stock exchange on July 4 when a bomb exploded, but caused little damage. Mrs. Rigby surrendered voluntarily to the police. When arraigned today she gloried in her achievements saying she wanted Sir William L. Lever considered as a show place than as a beacon lighted for the king and the country to see women suffering an insupportable grievance. She told the magistrate: "I lighted that bomb, I placed the bomb in the Liverpool cotton exchange to show how easy it is to procure them and to place them in public buildings. I might just as easily have blown up the Nelson monument." She was remanded for further hearings. Edith Rigby has been a member of the Women's Social and Political Union and the Militant Suffragette organization for many years and has taken a great part in public movements to promote the welfare of women. She has been imprisoned five times in connection with the suffrage movement and was on several occasions released owing to the breakdown of her health after hunger strikes. Mrs. Rigby in the course of her speech to the magistrate said: "I chose the Liverpool cotton exchange because the cotton industry has been built up largely by women labor. Merchants are willing to get power and wealth out of the labor of women while the women themselves are denied the vote and citizenship. This is the first knock at the door. Under that cat and mouse act one of the greatest women in the land is going to be done to death. If the government is going to kill that woman this is a warning."

REVEAL CONSPIRACY TO KILL COL. HEVIA

Cuban Secret Police Unearth Plot of Politicians to Assassinate Colonel Hevia, Secretary of Interior.

Havana, Cuba, July 10.—The Cuban secret service police report today the discovery of a conspiracy among the adherents of Gov. Asbert to assassinate Col. Aurilio Hevia, secretary of the interior, whom they accuse of attempting to bring to party by deriding the late General Armando Riva, chief of the Cuban national police, to raid the Asbert club Monday night. This action apparently precipitated the tragedy on the Prado in which General Riva was mortally wounded. No arrests have been made, but the suspects are closely watched and Col. Hevia is strongly guarded. Apprehension was felt that trouble might attend the passage of the funeral procession of General Riva through the city this afternoon. All precautions were taken, therefore, and detachments of infantry, cavalry and artillery escorted the body, while other troops and police lined the route of the procession.

CHILDREN'S BUREAU NEEDS MORE MONEY

United States Spends Millions on Animals But Only Few Thousand for Children's Bureau.

Seattle, July 10.—Besides the special session of the Pacific coast immigration, the national conference of Charities and Corrections held four sectional meetings this morning. Alexander Johnson, general secretary of the conference, addressing the section on children, severely criticized the practice of some states in spending $1,000 per capita in building state institutions for invalids.

"When we are face to face with the problem of providing for perhaps one half of one per cent of the population," he said, "we must get down to a rational basis of cost." Lewis Meriam, assistant chief of the federal children's bureau, contrasted the millions appropriated each year for the bureau of animal industry with the $33,500 for the entire work of the children's bureau.

WHITESIDE FORESTRY MEASURE IS ENACTED

If Signed by Governor No Additional Forest Lands Can Be Purchased for Next Two Years.

Madison, Wis., July 10.—If Governor McGovern signs the Whiteside bill which passed the senate yesterday afternoon, there will be no additional purchase of land within the forest reserve area before January 1, 1915. Meantime a committee of eight will make an investigation and render a report to the next legislature.

The bill was on the calendar for passage. Senator Skowronek asked for its indefinite postponement, claiming that a substitute to a similar bill should be adopted which would permit purchases within certain restricted territories. Senator Teasdale thought there was a discrepancy of $81,000 in the accounts of the state forester. In a speech of nearly an hour Senator Hustling pointed out that the difference was accounted for by the fact that the figures in the office of secretary of state were for the fiscal year and those of the state forester were for the calendar year.

Hustling favored an amendment to the bill which would require the state to purchase of forestry land to continue. He said there were only 22 settlers within the restricted area and that nine of these have written letters to him in favor of additional purchases. Senator Killebrew said he was opposed to the reforestation project as he understood it. He said the state would lose nothing by delaying its purchase as the agricultural lands which the state desired to sell would go up efficiently in value to purchase the swamp lands.

After non-concurrence had been refused by a vote of 19 to 19, Senator Reshard asked permission to introduce an amendment which would permit the forestry board to take options on lands. To this Senator Stevens objected. Reconsideration of the vote was refused and the bill now goes to the governor.

For the bill—Senators Ackley, Albers, Nichol, Burke, Colverson, Cunningham, Glenn, Huber, Keight, Killebrew, A. E. Martin, Perry, Scott, Stevens, Teasdale, Weigle, Weissner, Zohby.

Against—Senators Bosshard, Hustling, Linley, H. C. Martin, Monk, Randolph, Richards, Skowronek, Tomkins, Tracy.

The senate passed the Snook bill prohibiting the killing of frogs in the months of March and April. It killed the K. A. Johnson bill reducing the peddlers' license fee from $75 to $50 for a two-year term.

MORE BANK OFFICERS RESIGN AT PITTSBURG

Resign Positions Following Comptroller's Closing First-Second National Bank—Conditions Normal Again.

EMERY CORN SYRUP BILL PASSES SENATE

Has Narrow Escape From Death—Concurred In By Vote of 15 to 12—Anti-Monopoly Bill Passed.

Madison, Wis., July 10.—The Emery substitute to the Pfennig corn syrup bill, which was fought bitterly at every step in its upward passage through both houses of the legislature, had a narrow escape from death in the senate last night. Just before the supper hour the senate non-concurred in it by a vote of 16 to 14. Immediately upon convening at night, reconsideration was voted, and the roll call showed a majority in favor of the bill. It was concurred in by a vote of 15 to 12, and reconsideration was refused by a vote of 16 to 11, thus refusing all further attempts to defeat it and it will now go to Governor McGovern.

A. E. Martin, a Milwaukee senator, was active in opposition to the bill which he said worked a hardship on the wholesalers and retailers and did not benefit the farmer. He believed Wisconsin should wait for the passage of a federal law. The bill would mean thousands of dollars to outside mail order houses, he said. Senator Linley, who had voted against the bill before the supper, said that after hearing both sides he had determined the safest plan was to vote for it, and he accordingly changed his vote.

"Wisconsin has maintained a high standard on all such measures," he said. "The federal law is a long time in the making. I am glad to have an opportunity to say that if I was wrong before I may now set myself right."

Senator Teasdale also spoke for the bill. He said the federal law is a long time in the making. I am glad to have an opportunity to say that if I was wrong before I may now set myself right."

Senator Weikle was for every interest of the consumer, he said, but he thought the bill should be amended to read "glucose and corn syrup" as a safeguard to the dealers. One Milwaukee dealer said he had sold $10,000 last year through the present bill, which forbids sale of wrongly branded "corn syrup." Senator Richards said the bill did not cover the whole subject and in its present form he would not vote for it.

Prohibition of trusts and monopolies, combinations, conspiracies, and agreements in restraint of trade is provided by the senate judiciary committee bill which passed the senate last night. The bill is under consideration in the day an amendment exempting co-operative societies, offered by Senator Hustling, was adopted, and at night the senate adopted a Bosshard amendment exempting the railroads and public utilities which are under the jurisdiction of the railroad commission.

The bill, which is a companion bill to the proposed marketing measure, is of broad scope and violations are made punishable by fines ranging from $50 to $2,000, each day during which any violation occurs being considered as constituting a separate offense subject to the forfeiture.

Senator Killebrew objected to the passage of the bill allowing printing for state institutions to be done outside of Madison, claiming there was grave doubt of its constitutionality. Senator Linley declared the objections were only technical, and that the bill was equitable, just and right. He said it was printed outside of Madison a share in state printing, and that the state can save money thereby and the work be done with less delay, inconvenience and delay. The bill was finally laid on the table.

An assembly bill concerning the naming of an attorney by the nearest of kin or the person or person receiving the largest interest in an estate: The bill was finally laid on the table.

CAPTAIN L. D. HICKEY FACES COURT MARTIAL

Little Rock, Ark., July 10.—Pursuant to the plan for testing of notes, while I think it is much preferable that the federal reserve banks should issue the notes yet knowing as I do how determined in their opinion are many who are powerful in the democratic party that the government should issue the note, I am willing in view of the fact that the notes are abundantly secured to yield that point, but even then the limit of the amount that can be issued should be "noted" on the note instead of being "noted" on the note when issued. I have only when the reserve bank is issuing them should fail to maintain a proper reserve of gold against liabilities.

WISCONSIN FIRE LOSSES FOR JUNE TOTAL $303,130

Madison, Wis., July 10.—Fire losses in Wisconsin were $303,130 in June, according to State Fire Marshal Clem Hickey. The monthly report, there were 186 fires reported, causing damage of $303,130. The most profitable cause was lightning, 45 fires arising from this source, causing damage of $53,000. Forty-two of the fires were buildings not rodded. Carelessness with matches, children playing with matches and mice with matches caused 21 fires and losses of $11,390. Adjoining houses today by fire caused 12 fires and damage of $12,390. Prominent and suspicious fires numbered eleven with damage of $26,870. Chimney fires were fifteen with damage of $15,800. Six fires arising from defective electric motors or electric wiring were responsible for losses of $12,100. There were 31 fires of unknown origin, damage amounting to $70,520.

CURRENCY MEASURE DISCUSSED FULLY AT BANKERS' ASSN.

George M. Reynolds of Chicago Speaks at the Gathering at Duluth on Proposed Wilson Law.

Duluth, Minn., July 10.—George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental National Bank of Chicago spoke before the Minnesota Bankers' Association here today on "The Administration on Currency Bill" and had both praise and criticism for the measure. Mr. Reynolds said that as a result of personal interviews with President Wilson and others at Washington charged with the responsibility of preparing a currency bill he had been impressed that it is the desire of all concerned to devise the best plan which it may be possible to enact into law.

Foremost among the criticisms and by way of suggestion for improvement Mr. Reynolds pointed out that the seven members of the proposed federal reserve board would all be appointees of the federal reserve board from the deliberation of the board of bankers and business men generally and that this would be calculated to place our while system of banking under the domination and control of a purely political board. Mr. Reynolds said that the recommendations for changes "as a means of bringing the plan to a more workable, as well as a more equitable basis" Mr. Reynolds said:

"First, for representation of the banks on the federal reserve board, for the organization of an advisory board composed of one member selected by each federal reserve bank, thus bringing into daily contact with the members of the federal reserve board, men who would be familiar with the banking business and agricultural conditions in each section of the country and thereby insuring a more intelligent discharge of their duties so far as their actions would affect business in the various sections of the country."

"Modifying the section relating to reserve by providing that until the plan has been fully tried out one thing of the reserves that banks in the country are to maintain and reserve cities are required to carry is now done under the requirements that banks in central reserve cities must carry 20 per cent reserve, one-half of which must be in form of gold and one-half of their credit in a federal reserve bank."

"This would decentralize reserves in the centers over one-half and would make the less liable to disturb general business habits and revolutionary shifting of reserves now provided for in the bill."

"Later on, say five years after the plan has been in operation any further shifting of reserve of the banks and the reserve cities would be subject to be affected without taking the risk of disturbing business that might allow if the plan proposed is in force."

"I would also recommend a change in the plan for issuing of notes. While I think it is much preferable that the federal reserve banks should issue the notes yet knowing as I do how determined in their opinion are many who are powerful in the democratic party that the government should issue the note, I am willing in view of the fact that the notes are abundantly secured to yield that point, but even then the limit of the amount that can be issued should be 'noted' on the note instead of being 'noted' on the note when issued. I have only when the reserve bank is issuing them should fail to maintain a proper reserve of gold against liabilities."

When Powhatan died, in 1618, Opechancanough became Sagamore of the thirty Virginia and Maryland tribes that had formed his brother's "empire." He also assumed Powhatan's mock title of "Emperor of the Indies." By this time the English had secured a strong grip on Virginia. Jamestown was a flourishing place. There were smaller towns and many rich plantation farms. Opechancanough foresaw that the Indians must soon be crowded out. Therefore he hated the white men. He had more personal reasons, too, for this hatred. Captain Argall of Jamestown, who had kidnapped his niece, Pocahontas, and had held her for ransom, had also, in a quarrel, struck Opechancanough a blow with his sword. The savage vowed to avenge that blow. And he kept his oath.

He managed to stir up his people against the English and to draw 1,500 fierce Indian warriors to his standard. Then he waited for the right moment to attack. A settler and one of the Indians had a fight. The Indian was slain. Opechancanough, clad for war and brandishing a tomahawk, rushed into the presence of the English governor at Jamestown and demanded redress. His plea was refused. In fury he drove his tomahawk blade into the wall of the house and called curses down from heaven upon the English. On the instant, however, he saw that he had too plainly shown his hatred, and, fearing lest he might have put the colonists on their guard, he said more mildly:

"Forgive me, Governor Wyatt. I did not mean to curse all the English, but only the vile Englishman, Samuel Argall, who struck me and kidnapped Pocahontas. I love all other Englishmen, and the skies will decay sooner than that love."

The settlers were deceived by such protestations. So when on April 1, 1622, Opechancanough turned loose his 1,500 savages upon the peaceful colony he caught the English utterly unprepared. In less than an hour the Indians had killed 350 white men, women and children. Jamestown was saved by prompt measures of defense, but the outlying settlements were ravaged with fire and steel.

Goes to War at Age of Ninety.

The settlers rallied and swept the Indians out of their old habitations. Opechancanough was forced to flee, and this act of cowardice lost him much of his power among the savages. About 6,000 Indians had lived within sixty miles of Jamestown. By the time the campaign was over the 8,000 square miles about Jamestown did not contain 1,000 natives. The rest were slain or captured or had taken flight. Opechancanough rallied his stricken braves as best he could, and for twenty years he waged an intermittent warfare against the white men. All the time he secretly planned a mighty blow for vengeance. At last, in 1643, he thought his chance had come. He heard that there was dissatisfaction among the colonists over the actions of Sir William Berkeley, the local English governor. This seemed a good time to strike.

Opechancanough was then over ninety years old, and so feeble he could not open his eyes without help. Nevertheless he raised a new Indian rebellion against the English and was carried along, on a litter, at the head of his savage forces. In April, 1644, the massacres began. Within two days 300 colonists were slaughtered and whole districts desolated. But Governor Berkeley, at the head of a colonial army, met and routed the Indians and captured old Opechancanough.

Opechancanough was taken to Jamestown. There he was placed under the charge of a white soldier. Opechancanough's braves had killed members of this latter's family. So the soldier, in cold blood, shot and mortally wounded the aged captive. As Opechancanough lay dying, with the people of Jamestown flocking about for a look at him, he demanded to see Governor Berkeley. When Berkeley arrived Opechancanough glared at him from his half-blinded eyes, raised himself on his elbow and gasped:

"Had the fortunes of war made you my prisoner I should not have exposed you as a spectacle for the crowd to gaze at."

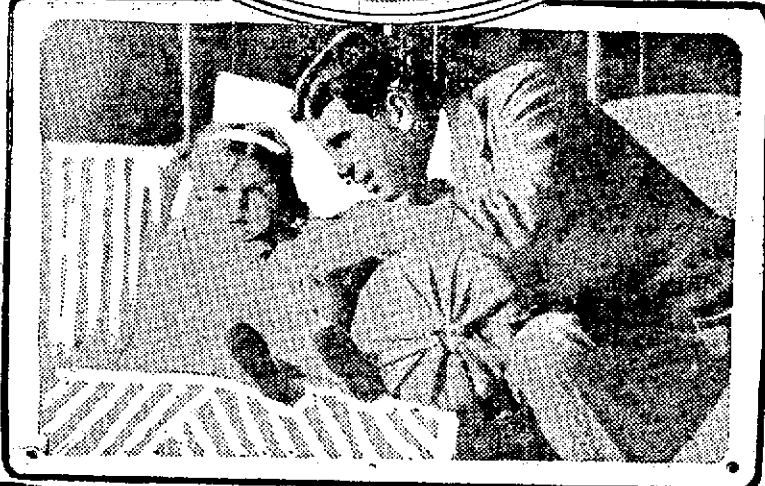

Then he fell back dead.

PICTURES PROVE THAT EVEN KINGS AND QUEENS HAVE HUMAN ATTRIBUTES

These very recent photographs are of more than unusual interest, inasmuch as they show the side of the life of a future king and queen that appeals more to the "common people" than all the display of court pomp and grandeur. That even the future heads of an empire fall to the seductive charms of their little ones is demonstrated by the two scenes shown. In the upper picture is the crown prince of Sweden, crooning over his sturdy little Prince Bertil, who may some day succeed to the throne of Sweden. In the lower picture is seen the crown prince of Sweden playing with his little daughter, the Princess Ingrid, just as fondly as if he were an ordinary, everyday father.

FAMOUS AMERICAN INDIANS BY ALBERT PAYSON TERNUM

OPECHANCANOUGH.

Capt. John Smith stood bound and helpless before the Virginia chieftain, Opechancanough, brother to the mighty Sagamore, Powhatan. Indian scouts had captured Smith soon after he left the new Jamestown colony on his exploring trip to the interior. They brought him before their chief for judgment.

Opechancanough had already heard with disgust of the white men who were building a settlement on Virginia's shores, and he was glad one of them had fallen into his hands. He was about to order Smith to torture and death, when the plucky English prisoner drew from his pocket a compass and calmly proceeded to show Opechancanough how to use the wonderful instrument. Then he went on to explain the course of the sun, moon and stars in such amazing fashion that Opechancanough thought him a spirit. So, instead of killing him (which would have crushed the Jamestown colony's chances of life and have put back for many years the white man's rulership of America), he passed him on to his brother Powhatan.

Revenge for a Blow.

When Powhatan died, in 1618, Opechancanough became Sagamore of the thirty Virginia and Maryland tribes that had formed his brother's "empire." He also assumed Powhatan's mock title of "Emperor of the Indies." By this time the English had secured a strong grip on Virginia. Jamestown was a flourishing place. There were smaller towns and many rich plantation farms. Opechancanough foresaw that the Indians must soon be crowded out. Therefore he hated the white men. He had more personal reasons, too, for this hatred. Captain Argall of Jamestown, who had kidnapped his niece, Pocahontas, and had held her for ransom, had also, in a quarrel, struck Opechancanough a blow with his sword. The savage vowed to avenge that blow. And he kept his oath.

He managed to stir up his people against the English and to draw 1,500 fierce Indian warriors to his standard. Then he waited for the right moment to attack. A settler and one of the Indians had a fight. The Indian was slain. Opechancanough, clad for war and brandishing a tomahawk, rushed into the presence of the English governor at Jamestown and demanded redress. His plea was refused. ## HOPE FOREST FIRES WILL BE UNDER CONTROL SOON

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
San Francisco, July 10.—A cloudless dawn brought hope to Mill Valley. Cortez Madera and Larkspur today that before night fall the forest fires on Mount Tamalpais would be so thoroughly beaten out that the afternoon trade winds would not fan them to new danger as they have for the last three days. Faint columns of thick smoke from the beds of the canyon showed that four fires were still smoldering. Mill Valley was still in danger.

Beyond His Understanding.

The Englishman was attending his first ball game. He seemed very uneasy after the fifth inning and finally said to his American friend: "I say, old chap, when do they serve the tea?" "They don't serve tea at a ball game," laughed the American. "No tea between innings?" gasped the Englishman. "Then what's the object of the blooming game?"

Ladylike Ball Playing.
 Ban Johnson's recent loud voiced disapproval of the playing of some of the American League teams, particularly Cleveland, and his statement that they are "too rough" has stirred up quite a little argument. The American league fans are not so very crazy about the ladylike play-

ens; anyway, and while they don't plan to encourage rowdism they would like to see a little pep and fighting spirit. Patsy Tabeau, the old time fighting manager recently offered a little comment on the present day lack of the real old scrappiness. "Go in and rush em off their feet, says Tabeau, that's what the whole Blake men think you're tough. Scare em to death." Tabeau's ideas may seem a little extreme but more of that sort of thing would help a lot of teams to

CARDINALS TO PLAY
OREGON CITY NINE

Local Ball Nine Schedules Game
With Oregon Team Here Sunday Afternoon.—White Sox Play.

The Janesville Cardinals have scheduled a game with the Oregon city team, and reports indicate that the visitors have one of the strongest teams in Southern Wisconsin as they have an undefeated record this season and have played fast teams from Madison, Evansville and New Glarus. The Cards will be well armed to take the village boys into camp as either Crandall, the star Milton college twirler, who has won three games for the locals, or Butters will be on the mound.

The Cardinals have been playing fast and furious for the last two months and deserve support of the Louisville fans. The team suffered several defeats in starting but after strengthening their weak spots have played good baseball enough to attract attention of some southern fans. In Crandall the Cards have signed up a pitcher that is without a peer in the southern part of the state, with the possible exception of "Cuddy" Borters who has been unable to get a slice of pie because of a sore arm. Porter, first baseman for the Cardinals, has been put out of the last two contests because of an injured leg, but will be put in spansters for the Sunday contest. The game will be played at the Driving Park in the city of Louisville.

White Sox Buoy.

The Janesville White Sox will have their hands full on Sunday for they are to cross bats with the Janesville Moose in the morning at the Driving Park and are scheduled to play the Beloit Athletics at Beloit in the afternoon. The Sox have not been playing their usual brand of ball lately, but promise to make it interesting for the lodge team.

Mullen will probably be selected to pitch against the Moose and either Britt or Lanphere will endeavor to quell the Beloit team.

THO COMING FROM BRUSH, COLEMAN SOON
SHOWS CLASS BEHIND BAT FOR PIRATES

Robert Coleman.

"Diamond Dick" Kinsella, scout for the New York Giants, is not willing to admit that he has made many baseball mistakes in his life, but it is a peculiar fact that three young ball players whom he did not think would develop have recently graduated to the big league, and that the same club, Davenport (Ia.) of the T. L. league, has profited each time.

Robert Coleman, now the property of the Pittsburgh Pirates, was peddled by Kinsella to Davenport for a paltry sum, and on June 11 was sold to Fred Clarke at a handsome profit. Clarke thinks so much of the youngster that he has used him in a great many games since.

Following the matches a fine dinner s served at the club house. The loit players enjoyed a very pleasant ernoon, and took the defeat in a im manner.

Never Return to United States—
Has Residence in Paris.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Havre, France, July 16.—Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, arrived here today on board the Corinthian and immediately upon landing announced his determination never to return to the United States. He said he would in the future take up his residence in Paris.

Will Forfeit Bond.
Jack Johnson's announcement that he would never return to the United States caused department of justice officials to be anxious to consider steps to bring about the forfeiture of his $50,000 personal bond pending in Chicago for his appearance in connection with white slave indictments upon which he has not yet been tried. He declined to declare the bond forfeited until it was clear that Johnson would not appear when wanted. The department of justice, it is said, probably will seek official confirmation of his refusal to appear and to return and present the matter again to Judge Carpenter.

Not Regretted.
Government attorneys expressed no regret over the negro's announcement. A few days ago officials considered the advisability of asking France to deport him upon arrival, but it was decided to let the case take its usual course.

Should Johnson ever return the year's imprisonment sentence would always be enforceable providing the circuit court of appeals approve the verdict.

TOO STRONG TO BE SAFE.

Bulgaria is credited by neutral sources of information about the new Balkan war with making much headway against the Greeks and Serbs alike. The armies of both Serbia and Greece seem to have been hard hit. But these successes may prove extremely perilous to the most powerful of the Balkan kingdoms. Every Bulgarian victory tends strongly to draw Roumania into action and to tempt the Turks to strike once more while their most dangerous foe among the lesser states of Europe is fully occupied with other enemies. The most powerful of the Bulgarian armies look the greater the incentive to Roumania to join Serbia and Greece in trying to break the strength of the Bulgars before it becomes formidable enough to make such an attempt hopeless.

Chiefly because the Bulgarian forces fight so well and the union forces fight so well and the nation behind them shows so much vitality and capacity for great sacrifices, it will not be surprising if the Bulgars presently face five countries in arms against them. They may be attacked by Roumania on the north, by Serbia, with Montenegro actively engaged against the Serbs, on the west, by Greece on the south and by Turkey on the southeast. In that case not more than 5,000,000 people would be at war with 39,000,000, and fully 20,000,000 of the allies would have to be rated formidable adversaries.

Meanwhile, three of the Balkan states are losing their fighting men rapidly and exhausting their resources. A month hence they may be reduced to strength. The Bulgars can make important gains if they seize the opportune moment for renewing the war which has not yet been ended by a definite and final treaty of peace. It is certain that the losses of the last few days have fallen heavily upon the Bulgars, Serbs and Greeks alike, and the battles fought have been bitterly contested. All the conditions existing indicate continued bloody work by large armies and the widening rather than narrowing of the theatre of war.

THE PLAYGROUNDS.

The public playgrounds are now a reality. The delight of the little people in having a place to enjoy themselves with simple apparatus, but under careful supervision of efficient directors, well repays the efforts of the men and women who made this possible. The two grounds at present equipped—the Jefferson and the Webster school properties—are evidence enough that a long-needed want has been filled. From the tiny little people who enjoy the sand pile, to the larger boys who do daring "stunts" on the bar and rings, everyone enjoys themselves. The instructors have endeared themselves to their little charges already and some of the older boys are so enthusiastic over volleyball, basketball and the other enjoyments they are fast becoming able assistants in the work.

These grounds are open to the children of the whole city and doubtless the success that will be attained this present summer will lead to the equipment of other grounds next year so that every portion of the city will enjoy the privileges. It is a great work and one worthy of support by citizens generally.

NO REAL REASON.

There is really no good reason for the proposed retirement of Mayor James A. Fathers to private life by the recall demand. The issue today is the same as it was when the movement had its inception months ago. There is no rhyme, rhythm or reason to the proposition that a city like Janesville should deprive itself of the services of an efficient city official to satisfy the wanton desires of a few disgruntled individuals who believe their personal privileges have been trampled upon by the enforcement of the laws and ordinances. Many have been led into the present fight through a misunderstanding. Many have followed the leadership of a few through bravado and others just to trail along because they are willing to do anything for excitement. It is up to the citizens interested in the growth and prosperity of the city, in upholding its good name to see that they register their vote on July 22d for the continuance of a good, clean, honest city administration and the retention of Mayor Fathers as head of the city government.

July 22d will tell the story whether Janesville wants to renounce a good stable form of government for a reactionary one or not. There is but one issue and that should be settled by the voters on one two order.

So at last the Baker law is going to be tested. That is, it is going to be taken into the courts to discover if it is legal. Perhaps by some hook or crook a legal flay may be discovered that will declare it unconstitutional.

According to the attorney general the Bull Moose party in Wisconsin can not have a party designation at the next general primary. By that time there will not be enough Bull Moosers to even be named.

With the Balkan states seeking to exterminate each other, cholera stalking through the land, Mexico enjoying a series of quiet revolutions, Uncle Sam has a little side enjoyment in his Morro war in the Philippines.

Illinois authorities are troubled over the problem of keeping women out of the bar rooms now that they have the right of citizenship. The white ribbon advocates say that is easy. Abolish the bar room.

To fully enjoy your vacation trip get vaccinated for typhoid before starting, and on your return take a thorough cure for sunburn and mosquito bites.

Broker Lamar certainly displayed much tact in his telephone communications with prominent trust officials in his manipulations of the money market.

England swarms with suffragettes and the arson squad is most busy. Meanwhile John Bull sleeps most fully and does not enjoy his slumbers at all.

There is no question but Roumania will be the real winner in the present Balkan struggle, if it continues to keep out of it—for a consideration.

The legislature must be thanking fortune that the weather is a bit cooler if they must keep their sessions much longer.

Now that the question of rebuilding the Milwaukee street bridge is decided the next thing is to get to work and build it.

A SPUR OF THE MOMENT

An Old Fashioned Lady.
She never threw a high-power bomb. She never tossed a brick or rock. She never made a corner speech. But she knew how to darn a sock.

She never went upon a hike. No government did she defy. She never joined a hunger strike. But she knew how to make a pie.

She never stormed about the polls. Nor joined in suffrage doings wild. She never smashed a plate glass front. But she knew how to rear a child.

Her kingdom was her little home. A queen she was, by our consent. She reigned supreme nor cared to roam. Old-fashioned, maybe, but content.

Adventures of a Suffragette's Husband.
The suffragette's husband wanted to go to a party and the suffragette was not at home. She was out delivering a suffragette speech.

He took a bath and when he climbed out of the tub he couldn't find a towel. So he dried himself by the radiator in the dining room.

He put on a clean union suit and when he started to button it up there wasn't a button on it, so he fastened it with shingle nails.

He looked for a coat and all he could find was one gray one and one black one, so he put them on.

After an hour and a half he found a dress shirt, but there wasn't a pearl shirt stud to be found, so he fastened the front of the shirt with bone collar buttons.

He started to put on his collar and found that there was no fresh laundry in the house, so he took a piece of stiff white cardboard and cut out a collar with shears.

He had to tie the necktie himself and when he got through it looked like the tag end of a Mississippi life.

When, in two hours and a half he was fully dressed and ready for the party, he stood before the cheval glass, raised his right hand and loudly yelled: "Horray! Votes for women."

This, That and the Other.
We are not betting on the ponies this year. We bet on one last year about this time and for all we have heard he hasn't got around the track yet. If you are bound to bet though, follow these instructions and you will not be disappointed. Take a $5 bill that you don't care anything about—one that you have no particular use for—and then pick out a nice looking horse, one with a pretty face. Bet the five on the horse at the prevailing odds and then hasten from the arena, catch the first car for town before the race and don't go back. Instead, go and buy a large hornets' nest with a comb and linger in the immediate vicinity. That will cause you to forget the race entirely and give you a new interest in life.

There was some class to the ancients even if the scientists are trying to grab them. They say Cleopatra danced the tango; Julius Caesar had false teeth; George Washington had red hair; Henry VIII used to wear a corset; Barbara Prentiss wore false bangs, and William the Conqueror tended cock lights, but not one of these ever went so far as to smoke a cigarette in a telephone booth.

When eating green corn, great care should be taken to keep the corn out of the hair and ears, particularly if you are dining out in company. Of course, if you are eating alone or in a restaurant you may go as far as you like in other words, you may chew to the blue and for the corn full where it will. The main object should be to get at least 55 per cent of the corn into your system and not more than 45 per cent of it on the tablecloth and the floor. The whole aim of corn should not be buttered at one time, for this is a waste of raw material. Nothing is swifter or more elusive than a piece of butter which has been placed on an ear of hot corn. A person is apt to miss it suddenly and find it a few minutes afterwards in his vest pocket or on the inside of his shoe. It is better to butter about one mouthful of corn at one time and then grab it suddenly. It requires as much dexterity as swatting the fly and is much more exciting.

According to Uncle Abner. By the time Hank Tumms and his wife finally decide where to go on their vacation it is time to begin buying coal again and they postpone their trip until the next year.

A fellow will haggle for an hour in a grocery store, but the price of a pound of cheese, but will go to a garage and pay three prices for gasoline without a murmur and be glad to get it.

It takes a funeral or a fire to set all the tongues wagging in a small town. When the average minister gets through settling the differences in his church choir he hasn't much strength left to spread the truth among the members of his congregation.

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

BACK TO THE FOUNTAIN.

It is told of Emperor Charlemagne that on one of his trips to Rome he took with him a large company of his choristers.

One day, overhearing a dispute between these musicians and those of Rome as to the relative merits of the song service of each, he rebuked his own choristers after this fashion:

He asked them whether they would choose to drink from a stream at its fountain or after it had been muddied by the impurities of its lower course. They naturally answered that they would drink from the fountain. His reply in effect was, "Return then to the fountain of St. Gregory," the Gregorian chants being the music of the Church of Rome.

Might not all Christendom profit by similar advice today? Has the stream been kept pure in its course through nineteen centuries and through the many nations and alien environment it has traversed? Is not the great need of the world today to return to the fountain, not of St. Gregory, but of the teacher of all the saints, the Man of Nazareth?

The living waters that arose in Bethlehem have become a mighty river, along whose banks are clustered the greatest nations this earth has ever known. Soon it will be a world girdling stream, and on its waters will appear sails from every port and the flags from every land upon the earth.

Have not some things been lost as the river has flowed through the years? Have we kept all the peace and good will, all the spirituality, all the loving kindness, all the quickening power, all the life giving touch of the waters as they bubbled from the original spring? Those who quenched their thirst at that immortal spring quenched it so fully that we are told they were never athirst again.

In gaining numbers have we lost quality? Have we not to relearn the divine secrets that were the glory and strength of the early church?

Back to the fountain! From the music heard in Galilee some notes of surpassing beauty have been lost. Let us strike again all the chords so that the strains of peace and brotherhood, healing of the individual and of the nations, renunciation, the bringing of heaven on earth, the elevation of man above manhood, of God above gold, all these and other kindred notes may be restored to the harmony.

At last the world is ready for the Christ message as Christ told it. We have caught the vision. We have had ravishing glimpses of a real Christian era, a veritable golden age, in the years that are to be.

NEW MILKING STOOL
Holder for Pail Projects from Be. Neath Movable Seat.

An Illinois man has designed a milking stool that has several distinct advantages over the old style. One of these advantages is a revolving seat, which enables the milker to turn easily in any direction. But the chief feature is the holder for the pail that revolves with the stool. This holder consists of a circular platform that projects from beneath the seat on a curved arm. It supports the pail six or eight inches above the milk.

This holder prevents the milk from being splashed on the milker's clothing or the ground. The bottom of the pail does not get dirty and there is no danger of refuse from the barnyard or stable getting into the liquid milk, as there otherwise would be. If the inventor had only designed the stool so that it could not be kicked over he would have achieved another success.

PAIL DOES NOT GET DIRTY.
The ground and the advantage of this is at once apparent to anyone who knows about milking. The bottom of the pail does not get dirty and there is no danger of refuse from the barnyard or stable getting into the liquid milk, as there otherwise would be. If the inventor had only designed the stool so that it could not be kicked over he would have achieved another success.

London's Primitive Water Pipes.
London's water supply formerly came through wooden pipes. These were of the simplest construction, formed of the stems of small elm trees, drilled through the center and out in lengths of about six feet, one end being tapered so as to fit into the adjoining pipe. The wooden pipes, of which at one time more than 400 miles were in use, leaked considerably, decayed rapidly, burst during frosts and were always troublesome. It was not until 1830 that they began to be superseded by cast iron, and a quarter of a century later some of the old wooden pipes were still in use.

MORE PUBLICITY FOR MISS CARROLL

Suzanne Carroll.

Miss Suzanne Carroll, the pretty New York girl who has figured as a heroine in some of the novels of Robert Chambers, has had a little more honor bestowed upon her. Chambers has just published a new book, "Gay Rebellion," and dedicated it to Miss Carroll. She denies that she was the inspiration for the heroine in this recent novel.

Doubling Human Life.
In 1866 the public health conditions of New York were in so low a state that the average length of life of the inhabitants was 30 years. In 1912 these conditions had been improved so that the average length of life was 66 years. Thus the value of human life, reckoned in terms of time alone, had more than doubled in less than half a century.—Century Magazine.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together. And until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Catarrh cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c. ## Dr. J. K. Dixon, a Philadelphia minister, wrote, in part, about the film subject "From the Manager to the Cross":

"Let me tell you, without the use of hyperbole, the pictures are marvels of photographic quality. They are a wonderful delineation of the New Testament Story of the Man of Galilee. They are splendid examples of historic reality. The settings are dignified, the action graceful. The devotion, both of the letter and the spirit, of the one supreme life lived on this earth passes before you without a suggestion of the outside world."

The pictures, in five parts, will be shown at the Lyric Theater next Monday and Tuesday, at admission prices of 15c for children and 25c for adults.

NO PUNISHMENT FOR WALL STREET "WOLF"

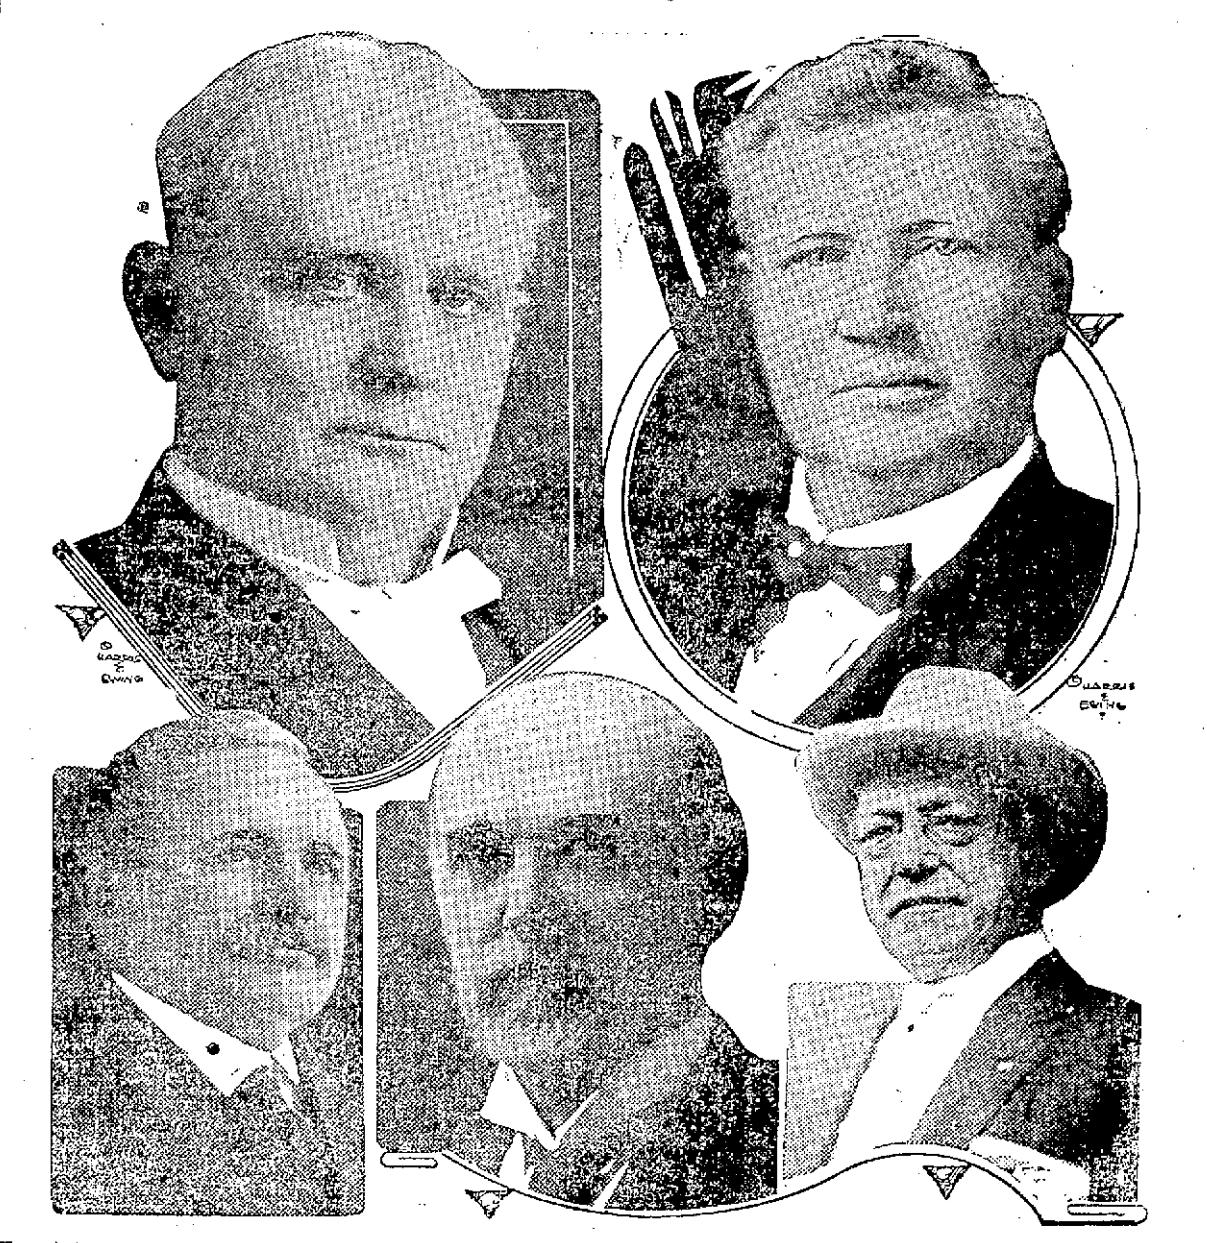

Members of the senate lobby in investigating committee have been vainly trying to find some law under which they may punish David Lamar, the New York stock broker who testified before the committee that he had impersonated Congressman Riordan of New York and Palmer of Pennsylvania in telephone conversations.

In Wall street Lamar is known as the "wolf." He gets on the nerves of captains of finance who would like to remove him from New York's financial district.

Men Whom Mulhall Says Lobby Fought Affirm His Charges; Will Testify Before Lobby Committee.

LOBBYIST MULHALL'S CHARGES

Colonel Martin M. Mulhall of Baltimore, Md., who says he was a lobbyist for the National Association of Manufacturers, and who has been subpoenaed before the senate "Lobby Hunt" committee July 7, charges that:

"The National Association of Manufacturers has for ten years conducted a tariff and general business interest lobby.

"The Association was responsible for the creation of the tariff commission.

"Relentless Warfare is waged against public officials and labor leaders who oppose the N. A. M.

"Strikes have been broken by the paid agents of the association.

"All the big trusts have paid money to the N. A. M. agents to carry on lobby operations.

"Past and present congressmen have profited by the lobbying operations of the agents of the N. A. M.

"Charge of attempt to bribe Samuel Gompers is revived. It is claimed that a plot was hatched to offer Gompers $40,000 and a permanent government post abroad. Gompers in turn tried to trap the plotters.

Washington.—While practically all the men charged by Col. Martin M. Mulhall with having played into the hands of the lobby which he says was maintained at Washington by the National Association of Manufacturers, have emphatically denied the charges, it is also true that several persons declared by Mulhall to have been the object of N. A. M. attacks support him in his charges.

According to Mulhall, Speaker Champ Clark of Missouri was opposed by every influence at the command of the association both in 1908 and 1911, because of his friendly attitude toward labor legislation. Clark declares that this statement is true.

According to Mulhall, every effort was made to bribe Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and after these efforts failed he was made the target of many forms of attack to discredit him. Gompers in a long detailed statement has affirmed the statements of Mulhall.

Others who were the objects of a relentless warfare on the part of the N. A. M. according to Mulhall are former Congressman John L. Burnett of the Seventh Alabama district, former Congressman Henry L. Maynard of the Second West Virginia district, Congressman A. Cooper of the First Wisconsin district, former Congressman Thomas E. Nichols of the Tenth Pennsylvania district, former Congressman Herbert Parsons of New York, Congressman W. S. Green of Massachusetts, former Congressman William B. Wilson, Pennsylvania labor leader, who is now in Wilson's cabinet; former U. S. Senator McComas of Maryland, opposed for every office he ran for because of his authorship of the general eight-hour bill; U. S. Senator William Hughes of New Jersey, former Congressman Kollmer and Cunnally of Massachusetts, John Mitchell, former president of the United Mine Workers of America, and Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor.

Several or all of these men will be asked to testify before the lobby investigating committee.

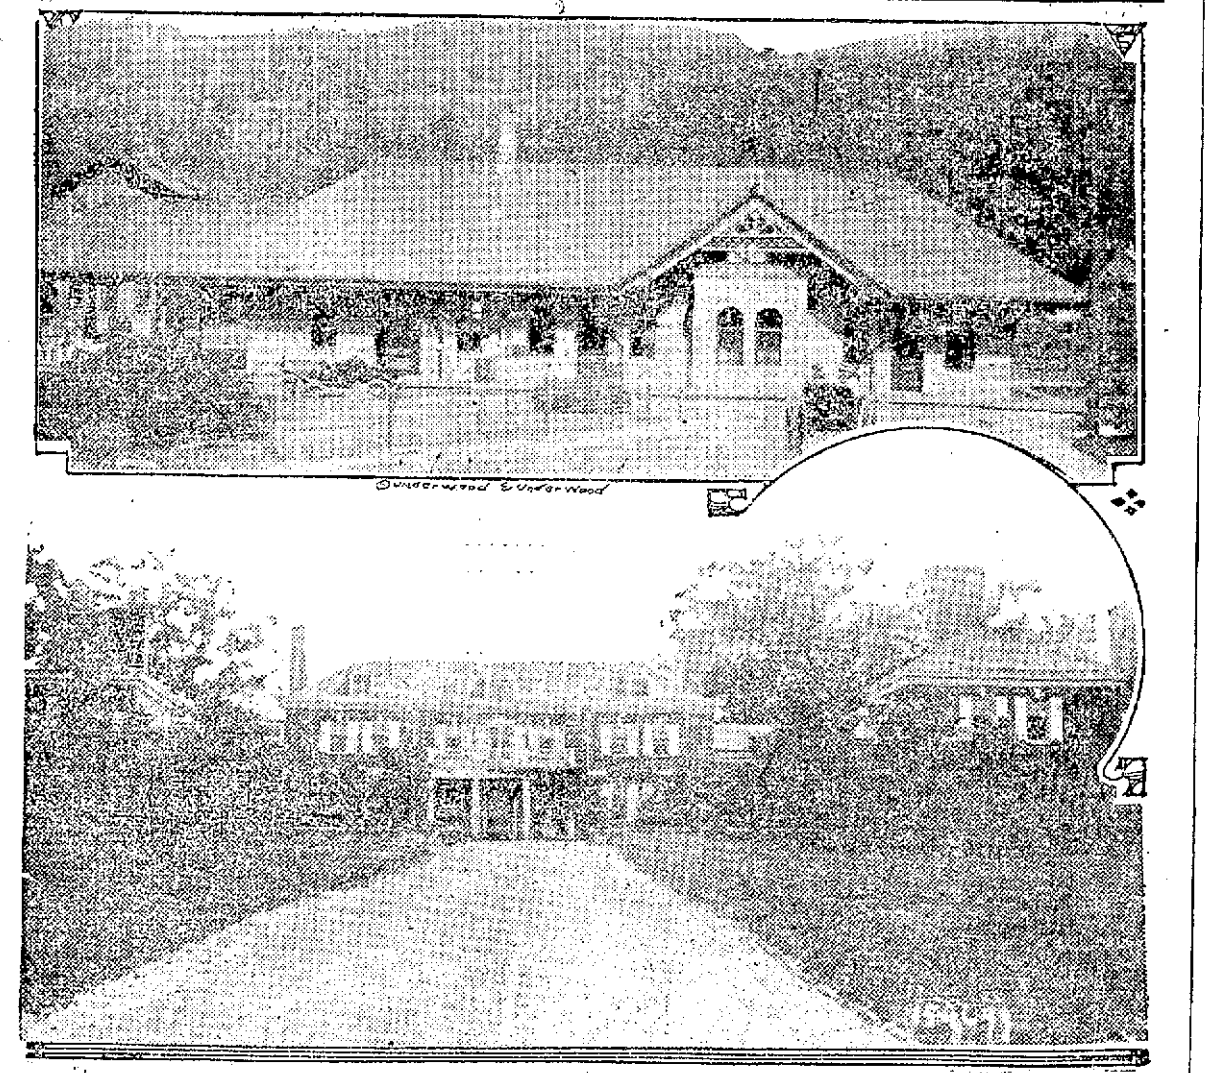

Horrible Death in Elevator Shaft.

Powerless to move, a man named Fulmer, employed at an abattoir, lay at the bottom of an elevator shaft at Philadelphia, Pa., the other day, and waited the descending lift, which crushed him to death. The man had fallen into the shaft, and his cries for aid were drowned by the noise of the machinery. The man fought desperately against the freight laden elevator. His body was flattened almost to the thinness of paper.

No Problem.

"The signboard is not a very aristocratic institution." "No, it is not." "And yet a number of famous people are stuck on it."

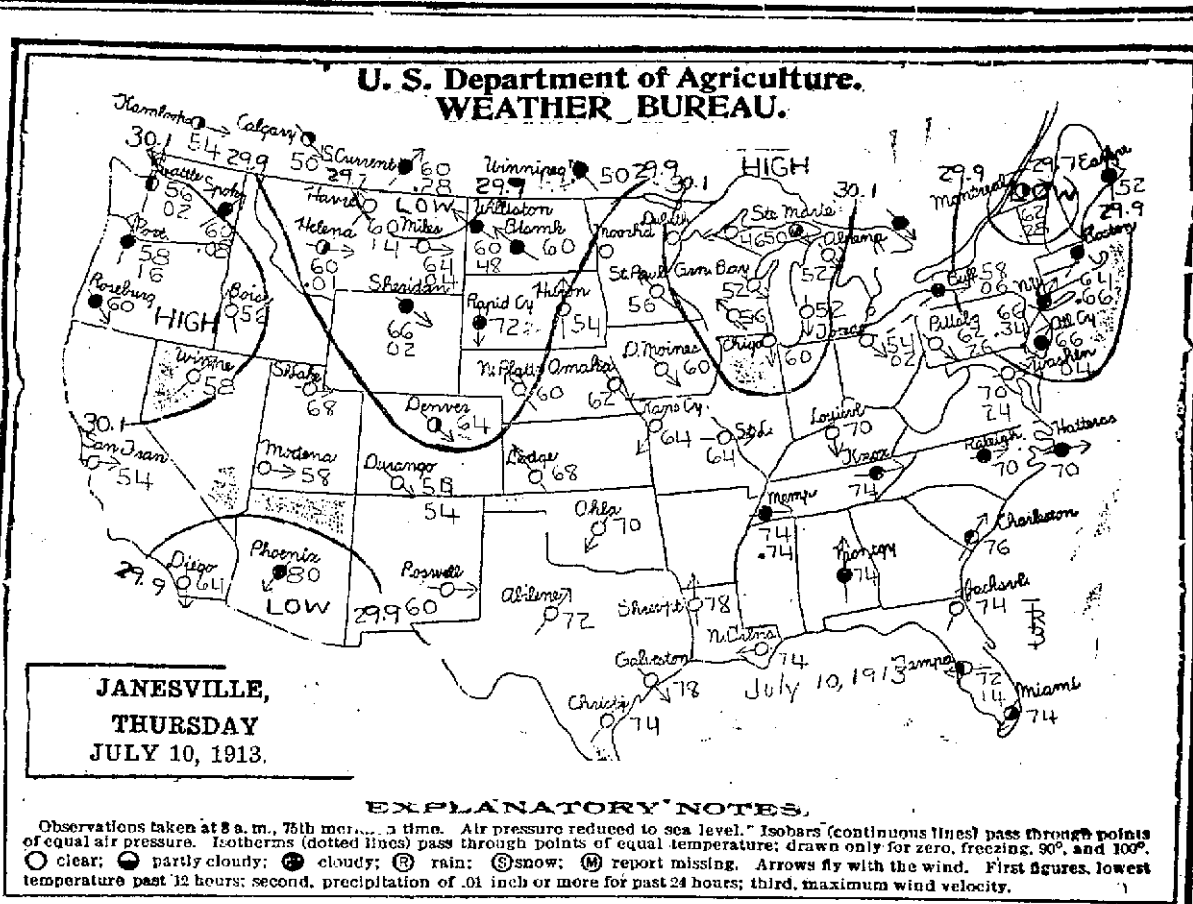

WINDSOR, VERMONT, AND CORNISH, NEW HAMPSHIRE, SPRING INTO SUDDEN FAME; THEY SHOULD BE THANKFUL TO WOODROW WILSON

Railway station at Windsor, Vermont, and summer capitol near Cornish, N. H.

President Wilson's announcement that his summer vacation (he will have one if congress adjourns in time) is to be spent among the hills of old New Hampshire near Cornish has been the means of arousing interest in that little hamlet on the Connecticut river. The charm of Barakenden, the summer capitol, may be imagined from the accompanying photograph.

One of the accompanying pictures shows the railway station at Windsor, Vermont, about five miles from Barakenden. This station is destined to be the scene of many prominent political personages, as the president's executive offices are to be located at Windsor during his residence at Barakenden.

WEATHER CONDITIONS

The high barometric pressures that prevails over the central United States is attended by fair weather and cooler temperatures throughout the Mississippi Valley and the plain states. In the rear of this area of high pressure and extending from southwest Canada to Colorado is a low storm wave that is advancing rapidly eastward and is producing rains and higher temperatures along its path. Weather on the Pacific Coast is under the control of an area of high pressure, and fair weather prevails. Low barometric pressure over New England is causing rains as far south as Maryland. Along the South Atlantic Coast the weather is fair.

At the area of low pressure approaches the temperature will rise and showers will begin Friday afternoon or night. The winds will be from the south east to south and will increase by Friday.

Barbers Act as Coroners.

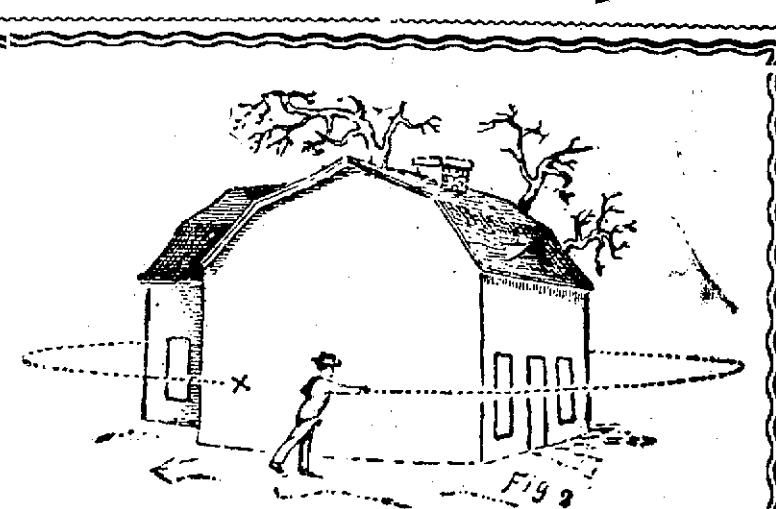

In Egypt a large proportion of the barbers are state functionaries. According to an edict issued by Ibrahim Pasha in 1848, every village barber was ordered, when death occurred in his district, to make a careful examination of the corpse, and report to the authorities any death occurring through epidemic, disease or foul play. Severe penalties were imposed for any neglect of this duty, and a fee of 5 cents was paid for each death registered. Five years ago the system of payment by fees was abolished and each village barber now draws from the government a fixed salary for his services.

Long Life of Clocks.

Of all machines made by man none can compare for long life with the clock. The life of a clock is as much longer than that of any other machinery as the life of a man is longer than that of a dog. The French city of Rouen has a great clock which was built in the year 1389 and is still keeping good time. Except for cleaning and a few necessary repairs it has never stopped during a period of more than five centuries. It strikes the hours and chimes the quarters.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

TALK AS A RECREATION.

THE FINE art of conversation has been the subject of many essays within the last few years.

For not only is the fine art of conversation very nearly a lost art, but the habit of conversation is rapidly passing away.

Some young married folks were expecting another married couple to dine. Said the wife, "I've planned a good dinner for them, but what shall we do in the evening? You know they don't play bridge." "Don't play bridge," repeated the husband, unbelievably agitated, "you don't say so? They are queer ducks, aren't they? Well, what shall we do with them?"

After much racking of brains it was finally decided to borrow a photograph from a neighbor with which to bridge over those bridge-less hours.

Several plans were suggested before this was finally decided upon, but in all their brain racking the idea that they might simply serve "a dish of talk" for their friends' entertainment never occurred to them.

The twentieth century is the age of many distractions.

Automobiles, bridge, the theatres, the lectures, the moving-picture shows, musical machines, the vast supply of free books and inexpensive newspapers and magazines, combine to keep us perpetually entertained, and leave us no time for such tame and unexciting occupations as mere conversation.

Talk we must for business and practical purposes, just as we must occasionally walk for the purpose of getting to places, but anyone who regards either talking or walking as a real pleasure in itself, even preferable to the pleasures of automobiling or the theatre, is looked at as a mildly insane.

Consequently, I realize that what I lay myself open when I make this statement. As I look back over the past winter and all the busy years at the theatre or opera, or at a friend's card table, or at home with my books, the one which stands out as the most enjoyable is that on which a returned traveler, a man of large gifts as a conversationalist, both to hear these and many other topics we talked, and the bells of midnight found us quite unable to believe that hours had fled since we drew up before the fire.

In these days when the cost of anything is one of the chief criteria of its value, the following recommendation of talk as a pleasure may not appeal. "In short, the first duty of man is to speak; that is his chief business in this world; and talk, which is the harmonious speech of two or more, is by far the most accessible of pleasures. It costs nothing in money; it is all profit; it completes our education, feeds our friendships, and can be enjoyed at any age and in almost any state of health."—Stevenson.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE DEPARTMENT

cream soups, souffles, stews, croquettes and desserts but some interest and esthetic sense and taste must be exhibited to produce the finest results. Leftover food can be properly taken care of if it is better to have it intervene between the first and second serving. That makes it possible for the first appearance to be forgotten if meat is served in croquettes or stew and eaten in the delicious soup. Or yolks of eggs into a salad dressing, or white of eggs into a cake, and, better still, there is a wonderful fascination to the experienced housekeeper in surveying her refrigerator and cupboard shelves and transforming odds and ends of unpromising materials into foods pleasing to the eye and palate and nourishing to the body as well.

The young housekeeper will not know all these things at once, but she will not be different from many others who were never so proud of their cooking as when they were able to make a new dish or put up a meal out of what seemed nothing to them, and that which might have been waste has turned into the best kind of thrift.

Suggestions for Remnants. When there are more leftover vegetables than would be needed for a soup they may be combined in a salad if they group best in that form. Or they may often be put together in a hot dish. The old-fashioned vegetable hash, often served with cold corned beef the day after the "boiled" meal, may be initiated by a combination of potato, beet, carrot, turnip or cabbage or any two or three of these common vegetables. Such hash may be enriched with fat from any roast meat, or with that which fries out from sausage or bacon while cooking. Thus, another form of leftover finds a use.

The simplest way to repeat any has is to put it in a shallow pan or deep pie plate and bake brown in oven.

No milk, sweet or sour, need be lost. It may be used in soups, sauces and puddings, if sweet, and if sour, in muffins and griddle cakes. Milk that is no longer sweet, and yet not sour enough to need much soda to neutralize its acidity, may be used like sweet milk in baking. Powder doughs after dissolving a bit of soda in it. Sometimes milk treated with soda can be scalded and used in a sauce or tapioca pudding or other pudding. Sour cream may take the place of butter in doughs, or if not very rich, of part of the butter and the liquid. It is also a useful addition to many salad dressings.

Put a little of the above cooked mixture and then pour over some of the gravy.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I would like to have your view of the following circumstances: I am sixteen, do not keep company with any young fellows nor do I intend to for some time or course. But I have boy friends. Some time ago a note was found addressed to me and signed by three boys; two were former school friends and the third I have never met. In the note they asked my girl chum and myself to come back to — and get things stirred up and to meet them at a certain place the following Sunday and have a good time.

Of course we did not meet them, but took the opportunity to speak to one of them later and told him we thought him too much of a gentleman to have done it and thought he had more respect for us than to think we would meet them, and meant no harm, and apologized, and asked if the other boys would write an apology if we would accept. We told him NO; we wanted nothing to do with them.

One of the boys knew nothing of the note, as he was away.

Now I want to know if, in your opinion, we did right, or should we continue to speak and consider their friendship?

The boys did very wrong and it was right for you to be severe with them. But as long as they apologized and seem to feel really sorry, it would be best to forgive and forget and give them a chance to show that they mean all right. This means that you can be courteous to them without being very friendly.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Please tell me. (1) How to make genuine Chinese chop-suey; also (2) how to remove an ink stain from a light gray wool suit, and oblige. FRANK.

(1) Chinese Chop Suey.—Half a chicken, equal amount, pork, one large onion, one handful mushrooms, one stalk celery, six Chinese potatoes (but, from Chinese grocer), one bowl cooked rice, one small dessert dish Chinese sauce (use in place of salt and buy from Chinese grocer).

Clean chicken and scrape meat from bones, cutting meat in strips one and one-half inches long and one-half inch wide. Cut celery, mushrooms, onion thin. Soak mushrooms twenty minutes in water, then remove stems. Cut celery in pieces one and one-half inches long. Wash and slice Chinese potatoes (they need no cooking).

Put chicken and pork into frying pan with a little salt and fry until done, but not brown or hard. Add sliced onion, cook a little, then add mushrooms and put enough Chinese sauce over to make them brown. Add some water and stew a few minutes. Add celery, then, after a minute, the Chinese potatoes. Last, add a little flour and water and make gravy and water in which above are stewed.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Things Worth Knowing.

Don't throw away any little pieces of soap. If you do not care to use a wire box containing the soap for washing dishes, then put them in a star bag and use them in the boiler on wash day.

To prevent hard boiled eggs from turning dark color, place them in cold water for a few minutes as soon as taken from the fire.

Stale macaroni, which can be bought cheap at the baker's make the most delicious addition to puddings and custard, if pulverized and sprinkled over the top.

Place lettuce in a granite pan, sprinkle with a little water. Then cover with an inverted granite pan and you will find the lettuce still fresh after a week's time.

Sliced Watermelon Pickles.—Cut lengthwise three medium-sized melons and put in kettle with enough water to cover them, two tablespoons salt, and piece of alum size of a hickory nut. Cook until the melon is clear and can be pierced with a straw. (Do not let it get too soft.) Drain in colander and when cool enough to handle, squeeze from them all the juice that will come. They will look stringy after this, but will fill out when added to syrup. Make this of two quarts vinegar, one pint water, a dozen cloves, one handful cinnamon bark, three quarts sugar; boil the syrup until thick, then add squeezed melon rind and set on back of range and simmer gently for two hours. If the juice is not thick as cream by that time drain it off and boil down, pour over rinds. Never fail to squeeze rinds before adding to syrup.

Tomatoes and Rice Prepared This Way Are Delicious.—Line butterfly moulds with aspic jelly, garnish with pieces of olive; set this garnish with a little more aspic and fill up moulds with tomato cream. When set turn out on cold, boiled rice dusted over with paprika and chopped parsley. Decorate with aspic jelly. To make cream rub four tomatoes through a sieve, add juice of one lemon, seasoning of salt and paprika, one cupful of gravy, half a heaping tablespoonful of powdered gelatine dissolved in half a cup of stock, two tablespoonfuls of whipped cream and a teaspoonful of chopped parsley.

ALTHOUGH DAISY MARKHAM HAS $250,000 OF NORTHAMPTON'S MONEY, SHE PLANS ON RETURNING TO THE STAGE BEFORE LONG

Daisy Markham and Marquis of Northampton.

Although Daisy Markham, the actress, has just received $250,000 from the Marquis of Northampton, the settlement made in her breach of promise action, she plans on returning to the stage soon. She is very pretty, and this fact together with her affair with the marquis, should make her a great drawing card.

In addition to the quarter of a million, the marquis will have to pay all the costs of the action, which total about $50,000. Never before has a woman been granted so much in a breach of promise action in England.

It is said that some happenings after the engagement constituted aggravated circumstances which induced the marquis to settle for an unprecedented sum.

BLAMES WATER-CHOKER FOR MOST DROWNINGS

Janesville Physician of Belief That Swimmers Drown From Choking and Not Cramps.

Swimmers drown from water-choke, not cramps.

Swimmers drown because they do not know what to do when the water-choke catches them.

Swimmers drown when attacked by water-choke because they try to save themselves instead of using their remaining strength to let companions know their condition.

Swimmers die after being rescued from the water because rescuers do not know how to relieve the swimmers from the water-choke.

The above statements were made by a practicing physician following recent drownings where swimmers were thought to have been seized with "an attack of cramps and sank beneath the waters before aid could reach them." In his practice as a physician and from actual observation he had concluded that the swimmers do not die from cramps and actual study has shown, he says, that death is entirely due from water-choke.

Can't Be Cramps.

"The greatest trouble is that a swimmer does not realize his danger when he is seized with water-choke," explained the doctor. "The water-choker seizes upon him and he tries desperately to help himself, but he cannot get out a few feet before he sinks."

"Now what are the symptoms of the drownings from so-called 'cramps.' The swimmer sinks suddenly. He doesn't come out. His companions merely miss him and later the body is recovered. It is from cramps, then it must be that his whole muscular system is affected, including the muscles of respiration, because if the swimmer could save himself, the smallest muscle could save himself. Medical science does not reveal a single instance where each muscle could become powerless through cramps except from a poison. Therefore, it will at once be seen that it cannot be that the swimmer drowns from cramps."

Slightest Infection Affects.

"Now to explain water-choke. Medical science teaches us that there is a small space or pocket between the true and false vocal cords. The cords are four in number, two on either side of the air passage, and when they are brought together they form the space mentioned. This space is lined by a membrane and is very sensitive to the eye. The smallest particle of foreign substance, other than air, which comes in contact with this membrane, by the reflex action, closes the air passage and causes the water-choke."

The swimmer, failing to realize his condition, attempts to save himself. He soon exhausts his energies and sinks. His actions, after having the water-choke, are no different than the ordinary actions of a swimmer. He strikes out for shore. His companions if they happen to be watching him, would notice nothing unusual in his action until he suddenly sinks. His strength, owing to the water-choke, has left him."

How to Meet "Choke."

"If the swimmer realized his condition, he could use his remaining strength in attracting the attention of his companions to his condition and they could haul him on shore. By holding his head downward and forward, they could relieve him of the choke."

The swimmer never gets cramps in shallow water. Therefore, for this is that the swimmer himself assumes a position of his head downward and forward so that when he is attacked by the choke he can relieve himself. If swimmers could be brought to realize it is water-choke and not cramps which causes the swimmer to drown, then I believe the number of deaths by drowning could be materially reduced."

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

THE LITTERATEUR.

By Howard L. Rann.

THE Litterateur is a calloused book worm whose mind is littered with literature to such an extent that he can tell the style of Thomas Carlyle from that of Robert W. Chambers without a moment's hesitation. His business is to devour all of the new books and then classify them according to the quality of the literature. He is a man of no other interests, his life is a life of letters. He is a man of no other interests, his life is a life of letters. He is a man of no other interests, his life is a life of letters.

One of the most trying persons in social life is the Litterateur. He is a man who will never let a male guest get by with a stirring passage from Mark Anthony's funeral oration without moving to substitute what Shakespeare really said. This irritating habit has done more to keep deserving bachelors out of the state of wedlock than the high cost of living.

There is not much profit in the Litterateur business, as things go, and this is probably the reason why so few people engage in it.

OBITUARY.

George Bennett
George Bennett was born in Livingston County N. Y. Dec. 11, 1839. He died at North Johnston Wis. July 4, 1913, aged 73 years. When he was five years old his father died and he was reared in the home of his grandfather in Saratoga County, N. Y. Teaching school and working out he acquired a small capital and followed the well known path of emigration to the new state of Wisconsin where he arrived in 1855. Rock County seemed an attractive location and he bought the farm in the town of Lima which he owned at the time of his death and occupied as a home for many years. To this place he brought his young wife 55 years ago, Miss Susan F. Osmond, also reared in the same state. This Rock County community has been their home through all the years. The old pioneers, his neighbors, have one by one, passed on and are sleeping on the hillsides and in the quiet valleys once dear to them as the promised land of their youthful hopes, and few are left of the strong men and women who built their lives into this western commonwealth. Of this class was George Bennett, toiling to acquire a competence, to educate his family and earn them an honored place in society. He lived to the ripe old age respected by his townsmen and loved and honored in his family circle. He became a member of the Baptist Church at North Johnston more than 40 years ago. He leaves a wife and three sons, Dr. L. F. Bennett, for several years a physician in Beloit, Wis., and now of Spokane, Chester C. Bennett of Denver, and James Bennett of Lima, Wis. There are 16 grandchildren. Two of his sons are deceased. Dr. O. G. Bennett lived in Janesville in '99 and Thomas Bennett when a child. The funeral services were held at the Free Baptist Church in North Johnston on Sunday afternoon, July 7, at 2 o'clock, officiated by Pastor Sweet. The large congregation in attendance was evidence of the public esteem and sympathy with the bereaved family.

ORFORDVILLE

Orfordville, July 9.—Tuesday's storm did very little damage in the town. A few trees were blown down and several windows broken. Considerable damage was done in the surrounding country. Will Green's new silo was lifted from the foundation and Harry Jewett's tobacco shed was blown down. Dr. O. G. Bennett was in town Wednesday morning and stated that all the buildings on the Drew farm were blown down excepting the house.

The Old shows and Rebekahs had their annual banquet for Tuesday evening but on account of the inclement weather there were but twelve present so it was postponed until the 17.

Hattie and Mabel Jacobson were in Beloit shoppers Tuesday.

Mrs. John Nelson and daughters Winnifred and May went to South Wayne today and will remain several weeks. Mrs. Nelsons sons Gilman and Melvin who are employed at that place, will be home for a few days so that their mother and sister can keep house for them while there.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Wooster of Janesville came Monday evening for a few days visit with Mr. and Mrs. James Jones.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Schenk and children of Madison returned home Wednesday morning. Miss Emma Sater accompanied them.

Albert Nelson, known about town as "Stub" Nelson met with an accident. Nelson Bros. restaurant Monday. He was opening a pop bottle when it exploded. A piece of flying glass cut a gash in his arm and little finger of the left hand with which he was holding the bottle was badly lacerated.

Mrs. Scheisler of Blooming Prairie, Minn., arrived Monday noon to assist her sister, Mrs. Carl Thompson in caring for her son Alvin who was killed by a horse in week and two younger children who have the mumps.

Mrs. W. T. Green went to Elletts Wednesday to take a vocal lesson.

The Women's Missionary society met at the home of Mrs. Warren Taylor Wednesday afternoon. Lunn was served from four to five o'clock.

Mrs. Jane Trulson is having her barn shingled this week. Ole Toller son is doing the work.

CUB'S FOOD

They Thrive on Grape-Nuts

Healthy babies don't cry and the well-nourished baby that is fed on Grape-Nuts is never a crying baby.

Babies who cannot take any other food relish Grape-Nuts perfectly.

"My baby was given up by three doctors who said that the condensed milk on which I had fed her had ruined the child's stomach. One of the doctors told me that the only thing to do would be to try Grape-Nuts, so I got some and prepared it as follows: I soaked 1 1/2 tablespoons in one pint of cold water for half an hour, then I strained off the liquid and mixed 12 teaspoonsful of this strained milk with six teaspoonsful of Grape-Nuts, put in a pinch of salt and a little sugar, warmed it and gave it to my baby every two hours."

"In this simple, easy way I saved my baby's life and have built her up to a strong, healthy child, rosy and laughing. Her food must certainly be perfect. I can truthfully say I think it is the best food in the world to raise delicate babies on and is also a delicious healthful food for grown-ups as we have discovered in our family."

Grape-Nuts is equally valuable to the strong, healthy man or woman. It stands for the true theory of health. "There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Well-being," in p. 10.

FOOTVILLE SUFFERED SEVERELY IN STORM

Many Windmills Blown Down, Sheds Crushed and Silos Topped Over.—Crop Damage Extensive.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Footville, Wis., July 10.—Several windmills were blown down, silos overturned, sheds crushed to the ground, and other buildings moved from their foundations by the heavy storm that struck this village yesterday afternoon. Growing crops suffered severely from the hail and from present appearances will produce not more than half a crop. Some grain fields will never be harvested. Snags and orchards were badly torn and the streets of the village full of broken twigs and branches. Telephone service is so badly demoralized that it will take weeks to repair the lines and for a considerable time telephonic communication was entirely cut off.

Windmills were blown down on the farms of Leon Spencer, Robert Bartlett, Harry Townsend and Oscar Brown. The old windmill on the property of Mrs. Edgerton in the village was demolished as was also the wheel of the mill of James Murphy. Silos were overturned on the farms of John A. Silverthorn and Mrs. Sophia Albright, the barn on the farm of Mrs. H. Beech was moved four feet, and that on the Talbert, Drew farm was blown down. Tobacco sheds were destroyed on the farms of John A. Silverthorn and Mrs. Sophia Albright. A big shed was also demolished together with the buggy that it contained. Fifty-four pines were broken out of the windmills and the silos. A large number at the Hart Townsend residence, and thirty-six in the windows of the John Martz home. A shed was also blown down at this place.

JUDA

Juda, July 9.—Quarterly conference will be held in the M. E. church Sunday evening, July 13. Rev. Dixon of Madison.

J. D. Myers and family left for their home in Muscatine, Iowa, Saturday. They have been visiting Mrs. Fannie Myers and family.

Miss Mabel Matzke went to Monroe last evening to visit friends.

D. T. Dunwiddie lost his new barn Tuesday by fire. The fire broke out about 7:15 a. m. in the top of the barn. Everything was destroyed except a harness. Mr. Dunwiddie surely has a heavy loss. The barn was also filled with hay.

Miss Lattie Brunkow had business in Beloit yesterday.

The wedding bells will soon be heard in this village.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Preston are the happy parents of a little baby boy, born Tuesday, July 8, 1913.

The storm did a great deal of damage Tuesday. The building of the garage was getting along fine; during the storm the wind was so strong that it blew part of the garage over.

Mr. Schrieder, of four miles south of here, died at his home Tuesday morning. Funeral services will be held here at the house at 11 o'clock and at 12 at the German church, Friday.

Mrs. John Burns of Monroe has organized a music class in Juda.

Misses Katie Hall, Mabel Coates, Pearl Nix, Amos Stuart, Ira Coates and Joe Denek motored to Albany last Friday.

Mr. Everett, of Lexington and wife spent from Friday until Monday with relatives of Albany.

FREIGHT TRAIN FIRST TO CROSS NEW BRIDGE

Number 322, Fond du Lac Freight Train, Has Honor of Opening New Bridge for Traffic.

Officials of the Northwestern railroad and the Clear-White Construction company were deeply interested in this morning for their plans for the opening of the new railroad bridge above the upper dam were frustrated when the Northwestern freight train number 322 was the first to cross the structure. While no elaborate program had been arranged such as spreading flowers before the train, the officials thought it would be more appropriate if the limited passenger train leaving Janesville at 10:35 for Fond du Lac was the first train to cross the bridge.

They failed to consider that a freight train, number 322, operating from Fond du Lac to Belvidere, was due in Janesville just an hour earlier than its more aristocratic brother, the passenger. When the engineers arrived on the east side of the bridge and the switch was open they took upon themselves the honor of opening the structure for traffic. To make matters worse the train stopped and switched on the bridge for half an hour.

Only the Northwestern half of the bridge has been constructed, as it was impossible to build the entire bridge at one time because of the enormous amount of traffic that the two local roads send over the line. Work will be completed in about ten days, the piers and lay the girders and stone slabs on the St. Paul side. As the piers have already been extended to the line of the old span work and will only necessitate building them up for about ten feet, the work will be finished by the last of this month as specified in the contract.

Old Home of England's Rulers - Burned in Part and Rebuilt Many Times - World's Most Beautiful Building - Contains Over 1000 Apartments

ENGLAND is justly proud of her famous Parliament House—that commanding structure which stands on the banks of the Thames and dominates the view of London from every point. It covers eight acres and was erected at the cost of nearly fifteen million dollars, and is today the largest and most beautiful meeting place of any legislative body in the world. It was formerly known as the Palace at Westminster and was the home of a number of England's rulers before the time of Henry VIII. This monarch practically gave up possession of the splendid palace when he moved to Whitehall, leaving the Westminster Palace to the Lords, Commons and great offices of State.

The beginning of Parliament House dates back to the days of King Canute, who when he came to the throne of England took under his protection the abbey and monastery of St. Peter's at Westminster adjacent to the palace. In 1235 a part of this palace was destroyed by fire but it was soon rebuilt. Additions were made in the succeeding reigns, notably by William Rufus to whom the existence of the present Great Hall is due. Henry III. added other apartments and redecorated the old ones. Nearly all of the Plantagenet Kings spent large sums on its extension and decoration. Several times it was partly destroyed, but this always resulted in the parts being rebuilt on a larger scale and decorated in a more beautiful fashion. The most extensive alterations were made during the reign of Edward III. The Courts of Law and offices of the High Treasurer and Lord Chancellor were rebuilt. The extent of the Palace at that period can be realized when it is known that it covered the whole of the site between Westminster Abbey and the river.

From the reign of Henry VIII the building at Westminster ceased to be a royal palace and all the succeeding events which occurred there are recorded in Parliamentary history. As time went on more space was required for the transaction of business and additions were added from time to time. This caused the accumulation of a lot of lumber in the cellars and an order was issued that it be burned in the grates. While this order was being carried out on October 10th, 1834, a fire was set on fire and notwithstanding that every effort was made to quench the flames the entire palace with the exception of the Great Hall was destroyed. Many of the pictures and articles of furniture were saved, but the historic old buildings representing the architecture of several centuries were swept away. The traditions, however, did not perish, for the rules and regulations of Parliament are the same today as they were centuries ago for no country clings to antiquated customs with a greater tenacity than Great Britain. As soon as the site could be cleared designs for a new building were invited, and one hundred and eight were submitted by English architects. A Parliamentary Commission was appointed to decide upon the style of architecture, and after much wrangling among its members the drawings that were submitted by Sir Charles Barry were selected. The design is based upon the Sixteenth Century Gothic style with some modern additions. Barry was hampered by suggestions from the Commission from time to time, but he finally succeeded in having one of the most beautiful buildings in the world erected. Certainly as a specimen of modern Gothic architecture it excels anything in existence today.

The House of Parliament From the River

Visitors are shown through the building on Saturday, and ample time is allowed for a thorough inspection of the beautiful furnishings and decorations of the rooms. During the recent opening of Parliament King George V used this chamber when he donned his robe and crown for the procession which passed through the Royal Gallery to the House of Lords. There is nothing particularly noteworthy in this Gallery except the two large frescoes "The Death of Nelson" and "The Meeting of Wellington and Blucher After Waterloo." It would be useless to attempt to describe in detail the beauties of these door on the right opens into the King's Robing Room. This apartment is rich in frescoes illustrating the legend of King Arthur. At the recent opening of Parliament King George V used this chamber when he donned his robe and crown for the procession which passed through the Royal Gallery to the House of Lords. There is nothing particularly noteworthy in this Gallery except the two large frescoes "The Death of Nelson" and "The Meeting of Wellington and Blucher After Waterloo." It would be useless to attempt to describe in detail the beauties of these apartments, and the writer must be content to tell only of the things which seem to please the average traveler and the House of Lords is one of these. It has been called the "Gilded Chamber," and justly, too, for it is certainly the most gorgeous apartment in the whole building. It is lighted by twelve stained glass windows containing portraits of the Kings and Queens of England. In the niches between the windows are statues of the barons who compelled King John to sign Magna Charta. Red morocco benches are used to seat the five hundred and fifty noble Lords who are entitled to seats in the House. The throne, covered with a gilded canopy, is at the South end of the room. On the left is the Queen's throne, and on the right is a lower throne for the Prince of Wales. The seats on either side are reserved for Ambassadors and other distinguished guests. Directly in front is the "Woolsack" on which the Lord Chancellor sits, and at the other end is the Bar at which the faithful Commons attend to hear the speech from the Throne and to hear the Royal Assent to the bills which they have passed. Above are two galleries—a small one for favored visitors and another for the reporters. The room contains some remarkable frescoes, among them heroic symbolical figures of Justice, Chivalry and Religion.

The House of Commons is a much smaller and plainer apartment than the House of Lords but none the less interesting, for it was here that the great Gladstone used to speak and when in power dominated the policy of England. There, too, Disraeli, that suave, crafty statesman, forced Parliament to do his bidding many times. The Speaker's Chair takes the place of the throne, and the mace which rests on the table before him is the symbol of the dignity and privilege of the House of Commons. This room was first used in 1552 and has been the scene of many stirring events.

Westminster, or the Great Hall, is one of the show places of London. It is said to be the largest hall in the world with a timber roof unsupported and was built by William Rufus and enlarged by Richard II. In 1820 it was discovered that parts of the roof were decaying and this was restored by the use of oak lumber taken from some of the discarded English battleships.

The Courts of Justice on the west side of the Hall are interesting from the fact that Kings and Queens have been on trial within their walls. It was in these rooms in 1517 that three Queens—Katherine of Aragon, Margaret of Scotland and Mary of France—pleaded with Henry VIII for mercy toward the four hundred and eighty men concerned in the "Rising of the Pretences." Thomas Wentworth, the Earl of Strafford, was tried there in 1649, while King Charles I and his Queen were seated behind a curtain listening to the case. Less than a year later King Charles himself was brought to trial as a "tyrant traitor and murderer." Warren Hastings was tried before the Court in this building in 1783. In 1832 the Courts were moved from this place to the Royal Courts of Justice Building on the Strand.

SUPREME COURT JUSTICES QUIT GRIND, LEAVING MANY IMPORTANT CASES UNDECIDED

Washington.—Although there are many important cases still undisposed of, most of the justices of the supreme court and their families have left the city during the past week for their summer homes, where they will spend the major portion of the hot months. Justice and Mrs. Hughes have gone to Lake Placid, where they have taken a cottage for the summer. Justice and Mrs. McKenna, and left for New York where they will visit their daughters, Mrs. Pitts Rutledge and Mrs. John Leggett Pultz. From there they will go to Boston to visit Mrs. Davenport Brown, another daughter. It is expected that within a few days all the justices will have left the city.

SEES LOW WAGE AID TO THE SOCIAL EVIL

Mrs. Raymond Robins.

Mrs. Raymond Robins of Chicago, President of the National Women's Trade Union League of America, says that investigations have brought out a close relationship between low wages and the social evil. "That there is commercialized vice we all know," says Mrs. Robins, "and that it sends its representatives into the day's work of factory and store we also know." But it should be definitely understood that there are girls by the tens of thousands who have maintained the integrity of their womanhood in the face of great personal suffering and self-sacrifice, as well as in the face of grave temptation.

TENNIS MUST BE LOVELY GAME; FRAIL YOUNG WOMEN WHO CAN'T HELP MAMA GET BREAKFAST ARISE AT 4 AND PLAY IT ALL DAY

Tennis owes a large part of its popularity to the fact that it finds great favor with the feminine gender. Which of course endears the game to the gallant sex; if we do say so, and in this way the following is increased to the nth power. A pretty girl can create more tennis enthusiasts by appearing on the court in person than all the argument there is. All tennis girls, like all the angels in the little song, have big feet. This is more or less of an illusion, however, and tennis girls shouldn't be offended. It is because they usually wear white shoes which do make a girl's feet seem large. It is also interesting to note in this connection that frail young women who don't feel well enough to help mama get breakfast in the morning can arise at 4 a. m. to play tennis.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—And now they are prepared to show that they had a glorious time.

THE SECRET OF LONESOME COVE

BY
SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS

"AVERAGE JONES, ETC."

"Eh? What?" cried Kent, wrenching his shoulder free. "Go away! Can't you see I'm busy?"

"I'll give you something to think about. Look at this face of a cigar-store indian at the window. No! It's gone!"

"Gansett Jim, probably," opined Kent. "Just where his interest in this case comes in, I haven't yet found out. He favored me with his regard outside. And he had some dealings with the sheriff on the beach. But I don't want to talk about him now, nor about anything else."

On seeing this, Sedgwick let his companion severely alone, until a bustle from without warned him that the crowd was returning. Being aroused, Kent accosted one of the villagers who had just entered.

"Body coming back," he asked.

"Yep. On its way now," said the man.

"What occurred in the house where they took it?" Everybody was shut out by the sheriff and the doc. They had that body to themselves night and day.

At this moment the sheriff entered the hall, followed by Doctor Breed, who escorted the coffin to his supporting sawhorses. The meager physician was visibly at the end of his self-control. Even the burly sheriff looked like a sick man, as he lifted aside the coffin lid and spoke.

"There was reason, neighbors," said he. "Why the corpse wasn't suitable to be looked at. Nobody had seen it since last night. We've fixed it up as good as we could, and you'll now please pass by as quick as possible."

In the line that formed Kent got a place behind Elder Dennett, who had decided to take another look for good measure, as he looked. The latter was a productive one. No sooner had it fallen on the face of the dead than Dennett jabbed an indicative finger in that direction and addressed the sheriff.

"Hey, Lent! What's this?"

"What's what?" growled Schlager.

"Why, there's a cut on the lady's right cheek. It wasn't there when I saw the corpse last night."

"Ah, what's the matter with your eyes?" demanded the sheriff savagely. "You want to hog the limelight, that's your trouble."

This was evidently a shrewd lash at a recognized weakness, and the Elder moved on amid jeering comments. He looked back, however, and had been fixed upon Kent, saw a curious flicker and faded across the long-sawed face. It was exactly the expression of a dog that pricks up its ears. The next moment a titter ran through the crowd as a pumpkin in a rear seat called out:

"The dude's eyes ain't mates!"

Chester Kent, already conspicuous in his spotless white flannels, had made himself doubly so by drawing out a monocle and deftly fixing it in his right eye. He leaned over the body to look into the face, and his head jerked back the merest trifle. Bending lower, he scrutinized the unmanicured right wrist. When he passed on his lips were pursed in the manner of one who whistles noiselessly.

He resumed his seat beside Sedgwick. His eyes grew dull and melancholy. One would have thought him smug in a daze, or a daze, while the procession filed past the unknown dead. His monocle, which had dropped from his eye as he turned from the coffin, dangled against his hand. Chester Kent looked down at Sedgwick started and stared. Kent, kneeling, as seen through the glass, stood forth, monstrous and distorted, every line of the bronzed skin showing like a furrow.

The monocle was a powerful magnifying lens. The sheriff's heavy voice rose. "Any one here present recognize or identify the deceased?" he droned, and without waiting for a reply, he led the lid in place and signaled to the medical officer.

"Feller citizens," began the still shaking physician, "we don't need any jury to find that this unknown drowned woman."

"The deceased was not drowned," murmured from his reverie. Chester Kent had leisurely risen in his place and made his statement.

"N-not drowned!" gasped the medical man.

"Certainly not! As you must know, if you made an autopsy," replied the other quizzically. "There's plenty of testimony without that. We heard the witnesses that saw the drowned body pursued in the manner of a dog that pricks up its ears. The body was never washed ashore on that grating."

"How do you figure that?" called a voice.

"On the under side of the grating I found a cocoon of a common moth. Half an hour in the water would have soaked the cocoon through and killed the insect inhabitant. The insect was alive."

"Dragged down from the high-water mark on the beach. It was an old half-rotted affair, such as no ship would carry. Ask Sailor Smith."

"That's true," said the old seaman with conviction.

"You're an expert, Mr. Smith. Now, was that grating large enough to float a full grown human body?"

"Why, as to that, a body ain't but a mite heavier than the water. It should say it'd just barely float it, maybe."

"Exactly; but plus several pounds of clothing, and some dead metal ex-

"The clothes would have been soaked, and handkerchiefs weigh something," said Kent calmly.

"There might have been extra spars under the grating, that got pounded loose on the beach and washed away," propounded the medical officer desperately.

"Look at the face," said Kent with finality. "This is a bad coast. Did any one ever see an expression of such terror and agony on the face of one who came to death by drowning?"

"No, by thunder!" shouted somebody. "He's right!"

The crowd took up the cry. Clamor rose and spread in the room. The sheriff silenced it with a stentorian voice. "What are you trying to get at?" he demanded, facing Kent.

"The truth. What are you?"

Schlager's eyelids flickered, but he ignored the counter-stroke. "Look out! It don't lead you where you want to follow," he returned, with a significant look at Sedgwick.

"This is as far as it has led me," said Kent, in his clear even voice. The body, already dead, was dragged down and soaked in the sea, and then washed to the grating by a man who probably is or has been a seaman.

"Then the deceased met death on shore, and presumably by violence," said Lawyer Bain.

"Murder!" cried a woman shrilly. "Bloody murder! That's what it is!"

"Murder!" echoed a voice from the doorway. Gansett Jim, his half-Indian, half-negro face alight with fury, stood there pointing with stiffened hand at Sedgwick. "Dah de murderer!"

CHAPTER VI.

The Retreat in Order.

No one moved in the court room for appreciable seconds after pronounced judgment. As a flash-light photograph fixes an assemblage poised, with eyes staring in one direction, thus the half-breed's words had cast a spell of immobility over all. It was a stillness fraught with danger. No man could say in what violent form it might break.

First to recover from the surprise was the sheriff. "You, Jim, get down!" he shouted. "If there's to be any accusation done here, I'll do it!"

"I do it," persisted the half-breed. "Blood is on his hand. I see it."

Voluntarily Sedgwick looked at his right arm. There was a low growl from the crowd.

"Steady!" came Kent's voice at his elbow. "Mistakes like that are Judge Lynch's business."

"What was he the night of the killing?" cried Gansett Jim. "Ask him: What was he?"

"Where was you, if it comes to that?" retorted the sheriff, and bit his lip. "I saw a scowl."

At that betrayal, Chester Kent's eyelids flashed up, and instantly drooped into somnolence.

"This hearing is adjourned," twittered the medical officer. "Burial of the unknown will take place at once. All are invited."

"Invitation respectfully declined," murmured Sedgwick to Kent. "I don't want to be in the middle of it. I don't think I can breathe easier in the open country."

"Well, I'm exactly frightened," replied Kent in the same tone. "I want to run, which would probably be the end of us. Curious things about those handkerchiefs, isn't it?"

During their slow progress to the door he kept up a running comment, which Sedgwick supported with equal coolness. The crowd, darkling and undecided, pressed around them. As they went through the doorway, they following which a sudden pressure, on the shoulder. He turned to face the sheriff.

"Better get out of town quick," advised Schlager in a half-whisper.

"Thank you," said Kent in a clear and cheerful voice. "Where can I get some tobacco?"

"Sterrett's grocery keep the best," said some informant back of him.

"End of the Square to the right," said Kent, and strode off, followed by Sedgwick. As they took their seats following which a sudden pressure, on the shoulder. He turned to face the sheriff.

"Do you crave tobacco at this particular moment worse than you do the peace and loneliness of the green fields?"

"Policy, my young friend," retorted Kent. "I wish I could think up a dozen more errands to do. The more errands we get out of town, the less likely we are to be followed by a flight of rocks. I don't feel a very effective gun runabout spoiled by a mob."

Both of the men went into Sterrett's store, where Kent earned the reputation of being "a very dear, choosy about what he gets," and came out into a considerable part of the populace, which had followed. As they neared the sheriff put his foot on the running-board.

"Better take my tip," he said significantly.

"Very Well," returned Kent. "There will be no arrest, then?"

"Not just now. I felt a tongue of fire at the scientist's long jaw, 'nor at any other time," he concluded.

"Vell, this is fine pic-nickings! Mine Louie, flurtings mit all the women. It's all off between 'im and Louie!"

"I wanna go home! Those big guys won't let a feller law!"

"Gansett Jim,"

"What did the sheriff mean by asking Gansett Jim where he was the night of the murder?"

"Murder?" Kent quizzically.

"The murder of the unknown woman, of course."

"I don't know that there was any murder."

"Oh, well, the death of the unknown woman, then."

"Quit it. From what you do know, what do you think the sheriff meant?"

"What do you think?"

"I think Gansett Jim killed her and is trying to turn suspicion on me."

"But if the sheriff knows where Gansett Jim was at the time of the killing, he can't suppose me guilty. I wonder if he really does believe me guilty?"

"If he does, he doesn't care. His concern is quite apart from your guilt. It's too much for me," confessed the artist.

"And for me. That is why I am going back to the village."

"But I thought you were frightened."

"If I stayed away from everything that alarms me," said Kent, "I'd never have a tooth filled or speak to a woman under seventy. I'm a timid soul. Sedgwick, but I don't think I shall be in any danger in Annalaka so long as I'm alone. Here we are. Out with you! I'll be back by evening."

CHAPTER VII.

Simon P. Groot Does Business.

To his surprise, Kent turned into the village square, found the crowd still lingering. A new focus of interest had drawn it to a spot opposite Sier's, where a wagon, decorated in the most advanced style of circus art, shone brilliant in yellow and green. Bright red letters across the front presented the public admiration the legend:

SIMON P. GROOT
SIMON PURE GOODS

A stout projection rested on one of the rear wheels. Here stood the proprietor of the vehicle, while a man in a window were displayed his wares. It was evident that Simon P. Groot followed the romantic career of a traveling hawker, dealing in that wide range of commodities roughly comprised in the quaint term, "fun-kee notions." Before the merchandizing voice came to the new arrivals, Kent was struck with the expansive splendor of the man's gestures, the dignity of his robust figure, and the beauty of a broad whitening that spread sideways like the ripples from a boat's stern. Two ripples unhappily marred the majesty of Simon P. Groot's presence; a pair of pin-head eyes, mutually attracted to each other, and a mean and strident little voice. Freed of these drawbacks, his oratory might well, or could not but feel, have rolled in any of our legislative chambers more properly and just as ineffectually as Kent's. Standing by the roadside, she dropped like a flower. "Takes a rest for me," said she in mournful tones. "I must away upon my mission. Stay! I bade her. 'Ere you go, but give me a kiss to this revivifying flagon. De Lerrier's Tonic, the Tonic, free from intoxicants, poisons and deception, a prop to the flagging spirit. She looked, she tasted, she drank. Her color sprang to her cheeks. Her form pulsated with vigorous vigor. (Aged sir, said she, I know not your name; but if the blessings of a harried spirit are avail, your sleep will be sweet this night. Of this wonderful Tonic, ladies, and gentlemen of Annalaka, I have still a few bottles left at the low price of half a dollar each. Sickness lies before blood, it clears the precious life fluid of all impurities, and restores man, woman, and child, body, soul and mind.)"

The thrill voice rose and fell the wide beard quivered, the passion of salesmanship, the gaudy gauds, the self were replaced by half-dollars, until the market flagged. Whereupon again the orator took up his tale. "I never shall I give thanks for that inestimable privilege, the privilege of having given cheer to one of the brink of a dreadful doom. She vanishes, that fair creature, into the forest. I looked at my watch—the unerring, warranted, sixteen-jeweled chronometer which I shall presently have the honor of showing you at the unexampled price of three-seventy-five. Standing by the roadside, she dropped like a flower. "Takes a rest for me," said she in mournful tones. "I must away upon my mission. Stay! I bade her. 'Ere you go, but give me a kiss to this revivifying flagon. De Lerrier's Tonic, the Tonic, free from intoxicants, poisons and deception, a prop to the flagging spirit. She looked, she tasted, she drank. Her color sprang to her cheeks. Her form pulsated with vigorous vigor. (Aged sir, said she, I know not your name; but if the blessings of a harried spirit are avail, your sleep will be sweet this night. Of this wonderful Tonic, ladies, and gentlemen of Annalaka, I have still a few bottles left at the low price of half a dollar each. Sickness lies before blood, it clears the precious life fluid of all impurities, and restores man, woman, and child, body, soul and mind.)"

"The dream of Jones had been realized, and now, although a portly old fellow, it was with a sense of real pleasure that he prepared for a visit from his former friend."

"Ah, it's splendid seeing you down here, Long!" he said cordially, by way of greeting. "Quite like old times—what? And the missus, I know, is longing to shake you by the hand. But first—yes, you must come along and have a look at my greenhouse. You simply must!"

And Long went.

"Well, Jones," he said, "you've got a mighty pretty place down here, but, to my mind, it's just a little bare."

"Oh," replied Jones cheerfully. "That's because the trees are so young! Next time you come—why, they'll be so big that you won't recognize them!"

Wonder what I'll get on him?

What outdoor sport?

Realized that my ears had thrilled to a death cry.

He looked about him with a face of controlled emotion. His voice dropped to a throaty and mesmeric gurgle. "How frail!" he continued. "How frail and uncertain is the life of mankind! Who of these happy faces before me may not tomorrow be bathed in tears for the loss of some loved one? I show you here a unique collection of framed mottoes, suitable alike for the walls of the humblest home or the grandest palace. Within these tasteful frames are enshrined comforting mortuary verses, delicately ornamented by the hands of our leading artists, such poetry as distills assuagement upon the wounded heart, and these priceless objects of art, and agents of mercy I am distributing at the nominal charge of one dollar each."

Kent moved away, his chin pressed down upon his chest. He went to the office of Lawyer Adam Bain, and spent an hour waiting, with his feet propped up on the desk. When the lawyer entered Kent remarked:

"You rather put our two official friends in a hole this morning."

"Just a mite, maybe. But they're crawling out. I guess I spoke too quick."

"How so?"

"Well, if they'd gone ahead and buried the body as it was, we could have seen what we'd have seen."

"True enough. And you didn't see it as it was?"

"See what?" Did you?"

Kent's quiet smile sidled down from the corner of his mouth.

"Suppose," he said, "you give me the fullest possible character sketch of our impulsive friend, the sheriff."

Half an hour was consumed in this process. At the end of the time Kent scolded back to the Square where Simon P. Groot had been discoursing. There he found the ornate proprietor whistling over some minor repairs that he had been making. An invitation to take a ride in Kent's car was promptly accepted.

"Business first," said Kent. "You're a seller. I'm a buyer. You've got some information that I may want. If so, I'm ready to pay. Was any of your talk true?"

Spurring Him On.

A local business man has just taken his son, a former football star, into his office. Recently the following dialogue ensued:

"You don't seem to tackle work like you did football, son."

"The surroundings are different, father."

"I guess that's so. Maybe it would help if I instructed the other clerks to give your college yell at regular intervals."

Yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.—"I was always tired and weak and my housework was a drag. I was irregular, had cramps so bad that I would have to lie down, also a distressed feeling in lower part of back, and headache. My abdomen was sore and I know I had organic inflammation."

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier have helped me wonderfully. I don't have those pains any more and I am all right now. There are a great many women here who take your remedies and I have told others what they have done for me."

—Mrs. CHAS. MCKINNON, 1013 N. 5th St. W., Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

There are probably hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over 50 years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering. # ACTUAL FACTS FROM PERSONAL EXPERIENCE IN ADVERTISING.

THE following letter is self explanatory and demonstrates more clearly than any other argument the fact that big space filled with good arguments about a salable article will pull. What was accomplished through this one advertisement for the Hiawatha Water Company can be done for any other line of business. The Gazette is simply the medium between your business and the greatest number of people in this whole buying territory. It is a business force.

July 1st, 1913

Gazette Printing Co.
Janesville, Wis.
Gentlemen:-

You may perhaps be interested in learning the results obtained from the full page advertisement we ran in the Gazette, issue of June 21st ultimo.

HIAWATHA had not been advertised locally for several years, never before had we manufactured Ginger Ale for local consumption. Our advertisement advised your readers that we were able to make prompt deliveries and furnish HIAWATHA and its products in various sizes.

Within three days we received orders, by letter, personal call and telephone from fifty-four customers. Consider the fact that two competitive concerns make a full line of drinks, including Ginger Ale (very satisfactory drinks too) and that one of them has an established business of many years duration, and we believe you will agree that the Gazette is read by the "buying" public.

We compliment you upon the "quantity and quality" of your paper, the facilities of your job department for the execution of almost any variety of job, folder or booklet work and the courtesy of the managers and superintendents of the various departments.

Very truly yours,
